Peachtree City Named Most Affordable Suburb in Georgia

Peachtree City continues to be honored for its ideal living environment when it was named “most affordable suburb” in Georgia by Business Week magazine.

High importance among the magazine’s calculations was home affordability, with Peachtree City’s median home price at $247,900. The average commute was listed at 29 minutes. Communities with populations from 5,000 - 60,000 residents within 25 miles of the most populated city in each state were considered. Lower than average crime rates and median family incomes of $51,000 - $200,000 also were factors.

Additional considerations included high test scores in schools, well-educated residents, strong economy, green space, and low pollution. Cities were penalized for lack of racial diversity, poor weather, few children, and high divorce rates.

“A recreation-oriented lifestyle, award-winning schools, and 90+ miles of cart paths for walking, bicycling, jogging and golf cart rides make Peachtree City popular with all age groups,” said The Home Source Realtors Qualifying Broker Linda Huff. “A quick commute to Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport and downtown Atlanta add to Peachtree City’s appeal.”

In addition, Peachtree City received national recognition when it was named among the top 10 “Best Places to Retire in the US” by US News & World Report in 2007 and among the top 10 “Best Places to Live in the US” by MONEY magazine in 2005.
